Practical Applications of Jungian Type Theory to Career Decisions

Friday, November 15, 2013
8:30 – 3:30
1877 Club, University of Hartford
West Hartford, CT
www.ccacounseling.com/cccda

Why should career counselors use Jung’s 8 functions when trying to understand psychological types? This workshop will introduce the 8 functions and provide instructions in how to use the functions dynamically to recognize the impact on career selection and communication. Leading instruments supporting one’s working with Jung’s eight functions will be explained along with how to use the instruments with clients.

About the Presenter
Bob McAlpine, MS, is the President of Type Resources in Louisville, KY. His leadership and extraordinary classroom skills draw on over two decades experience as a career military officer, the U.S. Army's Organizational Leadership and TQM Programs for Executives, and graduate research on the MBTI® and Situational Leadership. He has designed and managed leadership assessment and development programs for hundreds of army officers and qualified hundreds of Type Resources clients to use type theory. Bob is the best kind of teacher, the kind who models the lesson.
